ABOUT ME

About me

I am a second-year student at the University of Westminster, specializing in full-stack development with React and Node.js. Passionate about building modern web applications, I focus on both frontend and backend development, striving to create reliable, scalable, and user-friendly solutions. I have a strong interest in web application architecture, efficient data management, and user experience optimization. I enjoy solving complex problems, collaborating with teams, and leveraging new technologies to develop innovative products.
